Nick Walkley, Chief Executive, Haringey Council

- The operating context for local government is changing dramatically – with rising demand, fiscal pressure and devolution shaping the agenda. What leadership challenges does this bring? What are you finding to be the key traits for those leading the delivery of local public service ‘systems’ from here on in?

Sara Llewellyn, Chief Executive, Barrow Cadbury Trust

- What role can independent social funders play in supporting social change during a context of profound flux in the roles of government, business and civil society? What reflections do you have on the things that enable you to make a difference to citizens? And what does this mean for the leadership qualities that the sector should be promoting?

Mike Adams OBE, Chief Executive, Essex Coalition of Disabled People (ecdP)

- What are the challenges in leading a values-led organisation through a period of structural and contextual change? How do you make ‘good’ decisions about your priorities and the partnerships (e.g. with commissioners, providers) that you build? What do you see as the biggest future challenges for your organisation?

Professor Dame Sue Bailey, Chair, Academy of Medical Royal Colleges

- The future sustainability of health and social care will depend on the ability of ‘system leaders’ to work across settings to deliver more integrated, more preventative and more cost-effective care. Where this ‘system leadership’ is already happening, what – in your view – is enabling it? And what does this tell us about the leadership qualities we need to encourage in future health and social care leaders?
